General Discussion

When we consider the variety of courses offered by

Antrim High school and the successful work which our graduates do in post secondary institutions, and the fact that we are doing all this with three teachers, it is evident that planning, guidance and activity exist in the school system.

A few days ago I received from the State Board of Education, as I have every year since I have been superintendent of schools, the certificate of approval of Antrim High school. I also report that Antrim High school is on the approved list of secondary schools of the association of colleges represented on the New England College Entrance Certificate Board, who have admitted our graduates without examination to such institutions as Bates College, Mount Holyoke, Worcester Technical Institute, New Hampshire University, the New Hampshire State Teachers' Colleges, and other institutions, and that none of the students whom we have certified have failed to make good.

The improvement of the lawn in front of the school is a bright spot in the village. It is in keeping with that which is being done throughout the country to make school grounds beautiful. The town could not have shown its approval more eloquently than it did by raising money to help pay for it, and some interested citizens by donating material for the walks. It is indeed a community project.

The commerce curriculum in the high school is the only attempt which is being made in town for vocational education, of which there is great need in the country at the present time. Considering the small size of our high school the town cannot afford the introduction of further vocational courses. Yet even our small group of young people deserve some consideration in learning some basic skills with their hands to enable them to make a graceful entry in our industries. The encouragement of a good 4-H Club in the town could be made to partly satisfy this need. Young men between seventeen and twenty-five years of age can also take advantage of courses which are being offered nights in neighboring high schools with shop facilities, in connection with the National Defense program. In connection with this line of thought I would like to raise the question as to whether a plan could be worked out with the directors and owners of local industries in Antrim to develop an honest to goodness apprentice system to give young men and women an opportunity to acquire the skills required by local industries. With the cooperation of all interests in the community it seems that a greater effort than ever could be made to educate and train young men and women for present-day needs in United States.

Respectfully submitted

VINCENT GATTO,
Supt. of Schools.
